There also doesn't seem to be an export/print option, although the export feature is now more streamlined. An update to the Mac feature that lets you control the playback of a clip is overdue. Under Windows, like most other software, Photoshop Elements had this feature available, but full-screen controls have been added. It does the same thing as the Timeline view, but as Photoshop doesn't provide the ability to zoom out, the feature lacks a lot of the functionality that Timeline had, other than being able to pause or skip the clip.
